Features and major changes

- Self-hosted git hosts don't always provide the correct URL to Flow. Now you can use the Vendor URL page to configure, review, and modify your vendor URLs. Check out our article on managing integrations to learn more.

- Now you can see a list of email addresses associated with a user on the Alias column of the user list. This will help you more easily identify your users when they've used more than one email address.

- Username/password authentication has been removed as an option for GitHub and GitHub Enterprise integrations, since GitHub will discontinue password authentication on November 13, 2020. Existing integrations authenticated via password will continue to work, but will need to be updated before GitHub's deprecation date. Read more about the deprecation and how to update your integrations here.

If you need help, please email support@pluralsight.com for 24/7 assistance.